Lufkin, Texas,
Where a Southern Dream Came True

Hope is host today to publishers and mechanical staffs of the southwestern district of the Arkansas Press association, and it ought to be pertinent at this time to point out that the newspapers of the South helped promote an allied industry which has now become one of Dixie's greatest.

What I refer to is the newsprint industry. It is brand new to the South. We have made kraft paper and boxes for many years, but the resin content of Southern pine forbids the manufacture of white paper. The stain simply couldn't be removed.

But in 1933 Dr. Charles Herty, chemist of Savannah, Ga., solved the problem. He found that young pine yielded a wood pulp that could be turned into first-class newsprint. The announcement startled the paper-making world, because up to that time all newsprint had been manufactured from spruce in the Northern states, but principally in Canada, with imports of spruce newsprint from Norway, Sweden, and Finland.

Dr. Herty set up a pilot pulp plant at Savannah, shipped a batch of his product to a Northern mill to be turned into rolls of newsprint — and in 1933 nine Georgia dailies printed one day's edition on this first newsprint ever produced in the South.

I maintained a public file of all nine of those Georgia newspapers here at The Star office for many months. It was in the dark days near the end of the 1929-33 depression. But lumbermen and timber owners from miles around came in to see for themselves whether this miracle was true.

It was true all right. Publishers of the South, with the aid of bankers, private investors, and the Federal Reconstruction Finance corporation, began construction of a newsprint mill using the Herty process at Lufkin, Texas.

The Lufkin mill began producing newsprint in 1940, and The Star is a charter contract-holder. It was a Southern dream come true — a great new market for Dixie's vast pine fields.

More recently a second newsprint mill opened at Coosa Pines, Ala. — and a third is under construction just east of Chattanooga, Tenn.

These are vast enterprises, and I am devoutly glad to be able to report that the No. 1 mill at Lufkin has been a fabulous success. I have a summary of its 1951 operations here on my desk.

Lufkin turned out 130,996 tons of newsprint during the year, plus an additional 32,133 tons of kraft board and kraft pulp. The mill cleared the last of its bank indebtedness and paid the first common stock dividend in its history. You might think, well, 11 years is a long time to wait for a dividend — but as I recall, the main capital stock was preferred, with the common stock being given as a bonus. Earning a dividend on zero is out of this world, believe me.

But Lufkin had plenty of things to spend money on besides dividends, these past years — as with any new enterprise. In the last six years alone the mill used up 12 million dollars on capital expenditures, all of it derived from earnings. In 1951 it bought an additional 1,780 acres of pine land; it will make another land investment this year — and the newsprint trade understands that the mill, which doubled its original capacity in the mid-1940's, is planning to install a third unit.

This is a story you have known from the beginning — nine specimen Georgia newspapers tacked up on The Star's bulletin board back in 1933 marked the beginning of a dream. Today's financial report from Lufkin tells you that the dream came true.

District Press Association Is in Session Here

The first of a series of district mechanical conferences scheduled for key points in the state by the Arkansas Press association convened here at 10 o'clock this morning at Hotel Barlow.

Attending officers of the press association are A. P. Murray, of Wynne, president; and W. H. (Bill) Parker, Little Rock, secretary-manager. About 30 publishers and mechanical heads of southwest Arkansas's newspapers are expected.

The program during the morning will include discussions on newspaper make-up, press work, and shop "housekeeping."

Luncheon at the hotel will follow at 12:15, after which there will be a motion picture film by the Mergenthaler company showing maintenance work on various models of the linotype. A. E. Elliott, Mergenthaler State manager, recently underwent an operation and will be unable to attend, but the film will be shown by Mr. Parker of the press association.

After the film show the conference will move to Hope Star's plant, where Elbert Siders, chief stereotyper of Western Newspaper Union, Little Rock, major newspaper supply house, will give a demonstration on dressing (separating impurities from molten metal), proper care of metal, and actual stereotyping operation. For the benefit of the public it should be explained that the stereotyping department produces the newspaper's picture and cartoon plates, running molten metal onto a paper matrix — the picture in the matrix being transferred to the metal, which is then cooled and put on the press.

Compulsory Union Blocks Steel Peace

Washington, April 12 (AP) — The compulsory union membership issue was reported today to be the main stumbling block of both an agreement between the steel industry and the government, and between the government and CIO President Philip Murray.

Steel companies themselves apparently could not agree on the union shop issue. This would require all steelworkers to belong to Murray's steelworkers union.

Some firms were reported willing to give Murray a modified form of the union shop, others still were holding out against it.

The union's executive board bluntly warned last night that its patience was "not inexhaustible" — a plain hint from the union that if industry was loath to make a contract, the government should do so if a strike is to be avoided.

"The time is overdue," the union's executive board said in a resolution. "For a settlement based on the Wage Stabilization Board's recommendations."

The WSB's proposals, resisted by steel companies, call for a 17-1/2-cent pay boost, the union shop and other benefits estimated by the industry to be worth an extra 8-1/2-cent hourly per worker. The work-ers now have earnings averaging about $2 an hour.

DITCHES PLANE—Capt. John C. Burns, pilot of the Pan-American Airways plane which ditched five miles northwest of the entrance to San Juan harbor, Coast Guard ships and planes picked up 23 survivors and counted at least 10 dead. Resident of McCaskill Dies at Prescott

Mrs. F. E. McBrayer, McCaskill, died last night in a Prescott hospital. She had lived in Hempstead for many years.

She is survived by her husband, three daughters, Mrs. Sydney Ward of Hope, Mrs. Cecil Moore and Mrs. Claude Long of Benton, three sons, Tilman McBrayer of Prescott and Parks and Jack McBrayer of Toledo, Ohio.

Funeral arrangements are incomplete.

Jane Forman Not Allowed to See Husband

San Juan, Puerto Rico, April 12 — San Juan police refused today to let Singer Jane Forman see her pilot husband, Capt. John C. Burns, one of 17 persons who survived the sea crash of a Pan American Airways plane crash in which 52 persons are believed to have perished.

The singer, who flew here from New York especially to be with her husband, was informed that Capt. Burns, now recovering in Presbyterian Hospital, is being held incommunicado on orders of District Attorney Zullo Dueno Colon. She tried to gain admission to his room but was turned back each time. Upset, she returned to her hotel room.

Glenn Lawrence, general manager of Pan American's San Juan office, confirmed the situation and said he did not know the reason. Best opinion was that the district attorney wants to question Burns before anyone else does.

Meanwhile, the search continued for 9 of the plane's Easter holiday passengers still missing in the shark-infested Caribbean although the Coast Guard said there was "practically no hope" they still were alive.

Thirteen bodies were picked up near the scene of the crash, three miles outside San Juan harbor, putting the toll of presumed dead at 32.

A near miracle saved the 17 who escaped alive after the plane plunged into 10-foot waves yesterday noon and broke in two. Burns and his four fellow crewmen were among those saved.

According to eyewitnesses, Burns was something of a hero in yesterday's crash. He helped launch four life rafts before the forward section of the big four-engine plane sank, and urged everyone to put on life preservers. A few minutes later, Burns was seen in the water, holding a baby in one arm and an elderly woman in the other, and swimming grudgingly toward one of the rafts. A rescuing Coast Guard seaplane pulled all three aboard, but the woman and the child died within a few minutes.

Rotarians Hear Local Attorney

C. V. Nunn Jr. discussed the political side of government at the Hope Rotary Club luncheon at the Hope Hotel.

Ike Won't Quit Army Unless Nominated

Supreme Headquarters Allied Powers in Europe April 12 (AP) — Gen. Dwight Eisenhower said today he would resign his Army commission only if he is nominated by the Republican party for president.

Meanwhile, he said, he has made no plans for making a political campaign for the nomination after he is relieved June 1 as supreme commander in Europe.

Eisenhower told a news conference he had asked that his request for inactive status be made public so "I can devote my time to finishing the job I was sent here to do."

The general will leave April 18 for Brussels to begin a series of far-reaching visits to the North Atlantic Treaty Organization capitals in Europe.

"If I should be nominated I shall promptly submit to the President my resignation from the armed services," he said.

"I should then be free to speak, like any other citizen, on any subject."

Eisenhower's retirement from the NATO command — at his own request — was approved by President Truman and announced yesterday in Washington.

As a five star general however, he holds permanent rank in the Army, and upon his retirement from command he will merely revert to inactive status. He held similar inactive rank while holding his pre-NATO job as president of Columbia University.

Eisenhower told reporters that in the next several weeks — while the remains here — he will devote himself entirely to the affairs of his command.

"I am not going to discuss any kind of political questions, so I can devote my attention to this job. I must prevent politics from affecting this vital job."

"There are important things to do which I believe I can do," he said.

Sen. Henry Cabot Lodge Jr. (R-Mass), manager of the Eisenhower-for-president campaign, was at Eisenhower's headquarters for four days early this month, returning to the United States April 8. The two held lengthy conferences.

As to his possible successor as supreme commander, Eisenhower asserted, "I have not the slightest information on that matter."

His chief of staff, Gen. Alfred M. Gruenther, and the Allied commander in Korea, Gen. Matthew B. Ridgway, have been prominently mentioned in speculation about the new NATO boss.

Truce Talks Down to a Mere Murmur

Munsan, Korea, April 12 (AP) — United Nations and Communist truce negotiators went through the roughest flicker of the motions today, each waiting for the other to suggest a compromise.

"They've got to give," said Maj. Gen. William K. Harrison, United Nations sub-delegate.

Communists showed no signs of yielding. At each of the seven brief sessions this week they suggested a recess unless the U. N. Command had something to propose.

Today's meeting took only one minute the shortest this week.

Paisley Cubs to Participate in Scout Circus

Cub Scout Pack 58, sponsored by the Paisley PTA will be entered in the "Cub Balloon Game" act of the Caddo Council, 1952 Scout Circus.

They will be in competition with other packs in the council. Each cub has a balloon tied to his ankle with an 18 inch string.

The object is to keep the other guy from bursting his balloon while trying to burst the other fellows. Things are really popin' during this act and it is a very colorful affair. Pack 58 is also entered in the Grand Entry in which about half of the council's 2100 Scouts will be featured.

Cubs in Pack 58 will be glad to furnish tickets to the Circus at 25 and 50 cents. They will receive a commission from the sales and the profits from the show will give the Scouts better camping facilities. Get behind them in this big event which will be staged in Texarkana Spring Lake Park on Saturday, April 19 at 7:30 p.m.

Pack 58 under the leadership of Cub Master Rev. Charles Chambers is one of four Hope Units entered in the Circus.

Station KXAR will broadcast the special service at 6:30 a. m. and will rebroadcast it at 1 p. m. Sunday. The station will also broadcast the 11 a. m. service at the Presbyterian Church.

Sunday's union service will be the 18th held here. Everyone is invited.

Laying Flocks Planned by Hatchery

Tuesday night at 7:30 P. M. in the courtroom of the County court house the Poultry Committee of the Chamber of Commerce will conduct a meeting for prospective hatching egg flock owners.

Corn Belt Hatcheries would like to place with local farmers some 3,000 pullets of a particular breeding stock on June 1. Several people in the Spring Hill vicinity have already indicated that they would like to participate.

Anyone in the county who might be interested in operating a hatching egg laying flock is urged to attend this meeting. Plans for further development of breeding stock in this area will be discussed and the Poultry Committee is anxious to develop this particular phase of the poultry industry.

Care and management of the hatching egg laying flock, along with the feeding program, and other requirements will be discussed at this meeting.

CWA Considers Nationwide 'Phone Strike

Would Force Better Deal for AT & T Strikers

Washington, April 12 (AP) — Officials of the CIO communication workers union were summoned to a sudden meeting today to discuss the possibility of calling a nationwide telephone strike.

It would be aimed at forcing American Telephone and Telegraph Company to come to terms with about 45,000 striking Bell telephone workers in three states and Western Electric workers in states.

The five-day walkout already reduced service in the 48 states some 200,000 non-striking workers refusing to cross picket lines thrown up around Bell telephone exchanges. Western Electric's manufacturing subsidiary, A.T.&T., which also controls the Bell system, is not included.

Joseph A. Beghe, union president, called the session "a last-ditch effort to force a full-fledged showdown." "Even though we have struck our strike against the AT&T, Bell Company, Western Electric picket lines will remain up in the states and elsewhere across the country," he said.

This was taken to mean that Bell workers would not cross the Western Electric picket lines. Bolrine pointed out that telephone workers still are on strike in Northern California and New York.

Michigan's shutdown was yesterday on the basis of a 23-cent hourly pay hike instead of 25 cents the union demanded. He said this action would be a "general pattern" in other disputes.

Failure to get such agreements, he added, would result in nationalization of the strike over the week-end.

Minor Trouble Reported at Batesville

Little Rock, April 12 (AP) — First minor disturbances in the strike of Western Electric equipment installers were reported yesterday.

It ended without trouble. Two WB pickets — who were identified by name — were taken from their post near the western Bell Telephone exchange at Batesville, Miss., from a small group of onlookers.

The Batesville exchange is one of the 100 largest in the nation. The strikers are members of the CIO Communication Workers of America, 50,000 employees — who are involved in the strike — the pickets appear to be and other union employees.

The pickets withdrew. The strikers interfere with service far hasn't completely cut off service. Batesville is a small town in the southwestern part of the state.

Police Chief William Batesville said the strikers stay at Batesville for a few minutes, then leave. He said there was no trouble. He said the strikers are not allowed to picket in the town.

Rebels Tighten Grip in Revolt in Bolivia

La Paz, Bolivia, April 12 (UP) — Victorious right-wing rebels consolidated their hold on Bolivia today, four-day campaign against the ousted government and promised national elections within five months.

The bloodiest revolution in Latin America's 40-year-old history ended yesterday in victory for the extreme right-wing National Revolutionary Movements (NRM) after 3 days of bitter see-saw fighting.

The capital's morgues and hospitals were overflowing with dead and wounded. Estimates of dead ranged from 200 to 1,000 and of wounded from 800 to 3,000. Property damage was placed at more than $2,000,000 with entire districts in ruins.

Nearly 1,000 persons were reported taken into custody by the rebels, but most were expected to be released. The whereabouts of the ousted president, Gen. Hugo Ballivian, were not known, but he was believed in hiding or to have taken refuge in a foreign embassy in La Paz.

Ballivian headed a 10-man military Junta which itself seized power in a coup only 11 months ago. The Junta voided an election held last May 6, in which the MNR candidate, Victor Paz Estenssoro, won a plurality but not the required majority of votes. Congress was to have decided the final result.

Paz Estenssoro was expected to fly back to La Paz from exile in Buenos Aires sometime today.

A dispatch from Arica, Chile, said Bolivian radio stations were asking for foreign medical aid for wounded and dying. Amateur radio operators said the wounded occupied all the beds and all available floor space in crowded La Paz hospitals. Bodies of the dead were said to be piled in the streets.

(Unconfirmed reports reaching Africa placed the death toll in the revolution as high as 3,000 and the wounded at up to 6,000. In Washington, the State Department said the U. S. embassy in La Paz reported that all American nations were believed safe.)

Hernan Siles Zuazo, civilian leader of the revolt, proclaimed himself provisional president and entered the capital in triumph last night after signing a cease-fire with government forces.

Police Chief William Batesville said the strikers stay at Batesville for a few minutes, then leave. He said there was no trouble. He said the strikers are not allowed to picket in the town.

DOROTHY DIX

Worried Student

Dear Miss Dix: I'm a first-year student at a university, taking such subjects as philosophy, psychology and comparative religion. As our philosophy professor himself says, the purpose of an education is to jolt the student into thinking for himself. My parents, who have not had a university education, call me a cynic, skeptic and a generally doubting, heartless person. I think the fact that I am going through for social work indicates I do have some regard for the feelings of others.

I was once a very religious person — now I don't know. Surely there would be no progress if we all accepted what we were told as gospel truth. It is evidence enough that so much of what was once accepted as true has been disproved. The motto of our college is "The Truth Shall Make You Free" — or is ignorance bliss?

Surely my present confused state of mind will not last but is only a phase necessary to realize how little I know. Surely my education will fill the void it has created with other worthwhile things. Or must I always wander with nothing to cling to?

Answer: Since you are in a questioning mood, may I also remind you that "A little learning is a dangerous thing," and you, who are embarking on the great experience of a university education, have acquired very little as yet. The enormous fund of the world's knowledge is at your feet, but you will walk a long way before you do much more than wade about its edges.

Try The Bible

Now let me recommend a little reading. Your university's motto is taken from the eighth chapter of the Gospel according to St. John. Read it, and you will see that truth in this instance, as in all others, is God. Knowing that God is the Truth will free your mind of all doubt as to your ultimate destiny and your immediate sins. To ally your soul through a sudden overdose of higher education, why not make an appointment for some good discussions with your pastor?

While it is true that knowledge has disproved many facts once held to be true, there are certain immutable verities that have held since the beginning of time, despite countless efforts to prove them worthless. The fundamentals of your church, the integrity of your country, the love and devotion of your family, are things you live

ELECTED
Little Rock, April 12 (AP) — C. Everett Nix of Little Rock has been elected president of the Arkansas Association of Life Insurers. Other new officers include Earl Williams of Fayetteville and M. S. Tommerlin of Jonesboro, vice presidents.

One person in every 10 in the United States received some kind of Red Cross assistance or training in 1951.

with day in and day out, accepting them unquestioningly.

I know something of the university you attend, and nothing you will learn there will make you waver from these essential truths. As you progress in your quest for knowledge, you'll learn that education only emphasizes the necessity for faith in these basic things of life.

Knowledge should be constructive, not destructive; use it to build your intellectual resources, not to destroy them!

Since you have chosen social work as your calling, you will have more than an average need for faith, a humane heart, and complete selflessness. Don't let a wrong conception of the word "truth" throw you off balance into an abyss of disbelief and apathy.

Dear Miss Dix: I'm 18 years old, two years younger than my fiancé. He expects to be drafted and we'd like to get married before he goes into the Army. My parents are willing to sign for the marriage license but his people aren't. We've known each other for two years.

UNDECIDED

Answer: Your fiancé is too young to be married, and in view of the uncertainty of his immediate future, is in no position to assume the responsibility of a wife. Abide by the decision of his parents; postpone the wedding until he's back in civilian clothes.

Dear Miss Dix: My sister and I disagree on this case. A few weeks ago, on a party, a friend of mine of long standing had a few too many cocktails. She was, to be brief, making a fool of herself. People were staring and talking. I like the girl and didn't want to see her belittle herself, so I started talking to her and tried to make her come to her senses. I thought I was being a friend. My sister said I should have minded my own business.

Answer: There are times to mind one's own business, and times to interfere. This was one of the latter. I don't see how a friend could stand by quietly and watch someone she liked make a public show of herself. You were a perfectly right to make an effort to set the girl straight. I hope you succeeded.

CHAPTER TWENTY-FOUR
HELOISE and Leonie bustled out to get supper, and Henri sat on the piazza to think. Leonie would go away for two weeks—that was settled, thank Heaven. This intimation for young Calvert might not outlast the separation. He smiled fondly at the thought of Leonie's enthusiasm for the young fellow's projects. The usual cautions in Spain of the young. A crop failure or two and the scamp would go right back North and that would be the end of him.

He felt a good deal better by supertime.

"I suppose you realize," he said to Leonie, "what a farmer's life is like."

"My grandfather was a farmer, wasn't he?" Leonie inquired.

"He was a planter," Henri corrected.

"Well, a planter. What's the difference?"

"There's a considerable difference," Henri said. A farmer, he thought, was a self-employed laborer with a red neck and whiskers and a straw hat and overalls. A planter was a gentleman.

"And what did granddaddy do?"

"Rice," Henri said, "before the War. Cotton, too."

"Who owns the land now?" Leonie demanded.

"Oh, it passed from hand to hand," Henri said. "First one of the Deans bought it, and then an Irishman named McGorry, and then an Italian who thought he would raise cabbage. It belongs to the People's bank now."

"And what's happening to it?" Leonie persisted.

"Henri sighed wearily. "Nothing," he said. "Everything is all grown down, and the house is falling down, and there are a few colored people who eat out a living from a few acres they got for taking care of the place."

Leonie was thoughtful. "If we get that money," she said, "we could buy it back and work it again. I heard Cousin Henry say there might be a fortune in Sea Island cotton."

"No, thank you," Henri said. "I don't believe I want to spend my last years on earth worrying about hull weevils."

"Maybe I'll have to buy the old place myself," Leonie said. "Then you and Auntie can come to live with me. Auntie can have charge of the housekeeping."

"Auntie will have charge of sitting on the front piazza," Leonie said. "I'll have the room down."

"Henri smiled. "I want to see you in a room down," he said.

dinner, Christmas and other big days? And the time I went around and drank all the wine that was left in the glasses and got tipsy? I must have been ten years old, but I remember it perfectly."

"I was nine when the War began," Heloise said, "but somehow I mostly remember being hungry."

Leonie, with four sandwiches and several glasses of tea inside her, did not appear impressed by this mention of underfeeding.

"If all of you hadn't been so anxious to have a war," she said, "all that would never have happened."

Heloise's eyebrows lifted, but she said nothing. Henri was indignant. Leonie went upstairs, remarking that she had to write some letters.

"It was about time we decided on that trip," Henri said. "That boy has already begun to corrupt her mind."

"All that interest in the old Edisto place," Heloise laughed. "A new bee in her bonnet. Farming, Leonie's being a farmer's wife," she said, "and getting up at five in the morning." And she laughed until Henri was bewildered. He didn't see any humor in the situation.

Henri was in good spirits the next evening. Having further extended his credit—this time from the Morris Plan office, since he did not care to return too soon to the obliging Mr. Pincus—he felt delightfully flush, even though he had already spent some of the money for Leonie's ticket.

"Well, my dear child, we're going to lose you again for a while," he said as they sat down to supper. "Here we've hardly got you back and we just don't feel that we can stand having you around any longer."

"Maybe I won't come back," Leonie said, entering into his joke. "Maybe I'll fall in love with one of the young men at the boarding house and elope with him."

Henri laughed gruffly. "I expect your Cousin Annette to keep a very sharp eye on you," he said, willing to jest about purely hypothetical suitors.

"I do hope," Heloise said, in one of her rarer fits of seriousness, "that you're not going to give Annette any trouble. I mean going off places without telling her and that sort of thing."

"I'll do everything possible not to worry Cousin Annette," Leonie said. "I won't make them regret their hospitality."

"Henri cleared his throat. "In that case," he said, "I want to announce to you something. We are giving you enough money to pay your own board, you remember."

Leonie indicated that she had heard.

"Naturally," Henri went on, "we understand that you are Henry O'Donnell's guest. On the other hand, it is presumptuous to accept such an invitation without showing some willingness to pay your own expenses."

"It sounds like bad manners to me," Leonie said.

Henri stiffened. "You don't understand these things," he said, "as well as we do."

"Still, Uncle, if people invite you they ought—"

"Now wait a minute. It isn't that we are ungrateful or unappreciative. But by showing that you are able to provide for yourself, you make it more comfortable for everybody concerned. No one can say that you are trying to sponge—"

"Just tell Cousin Henry that you don't like to feel you are imposing on him," Heloise explained.

"Just a minute, Sister," Henri said, not willing to be deprived of a chance at theorizing. "We want Leonie to understand this thoroughly." He held the first two fingers of his right hand close together as he often did when engaged in earnest explanation.

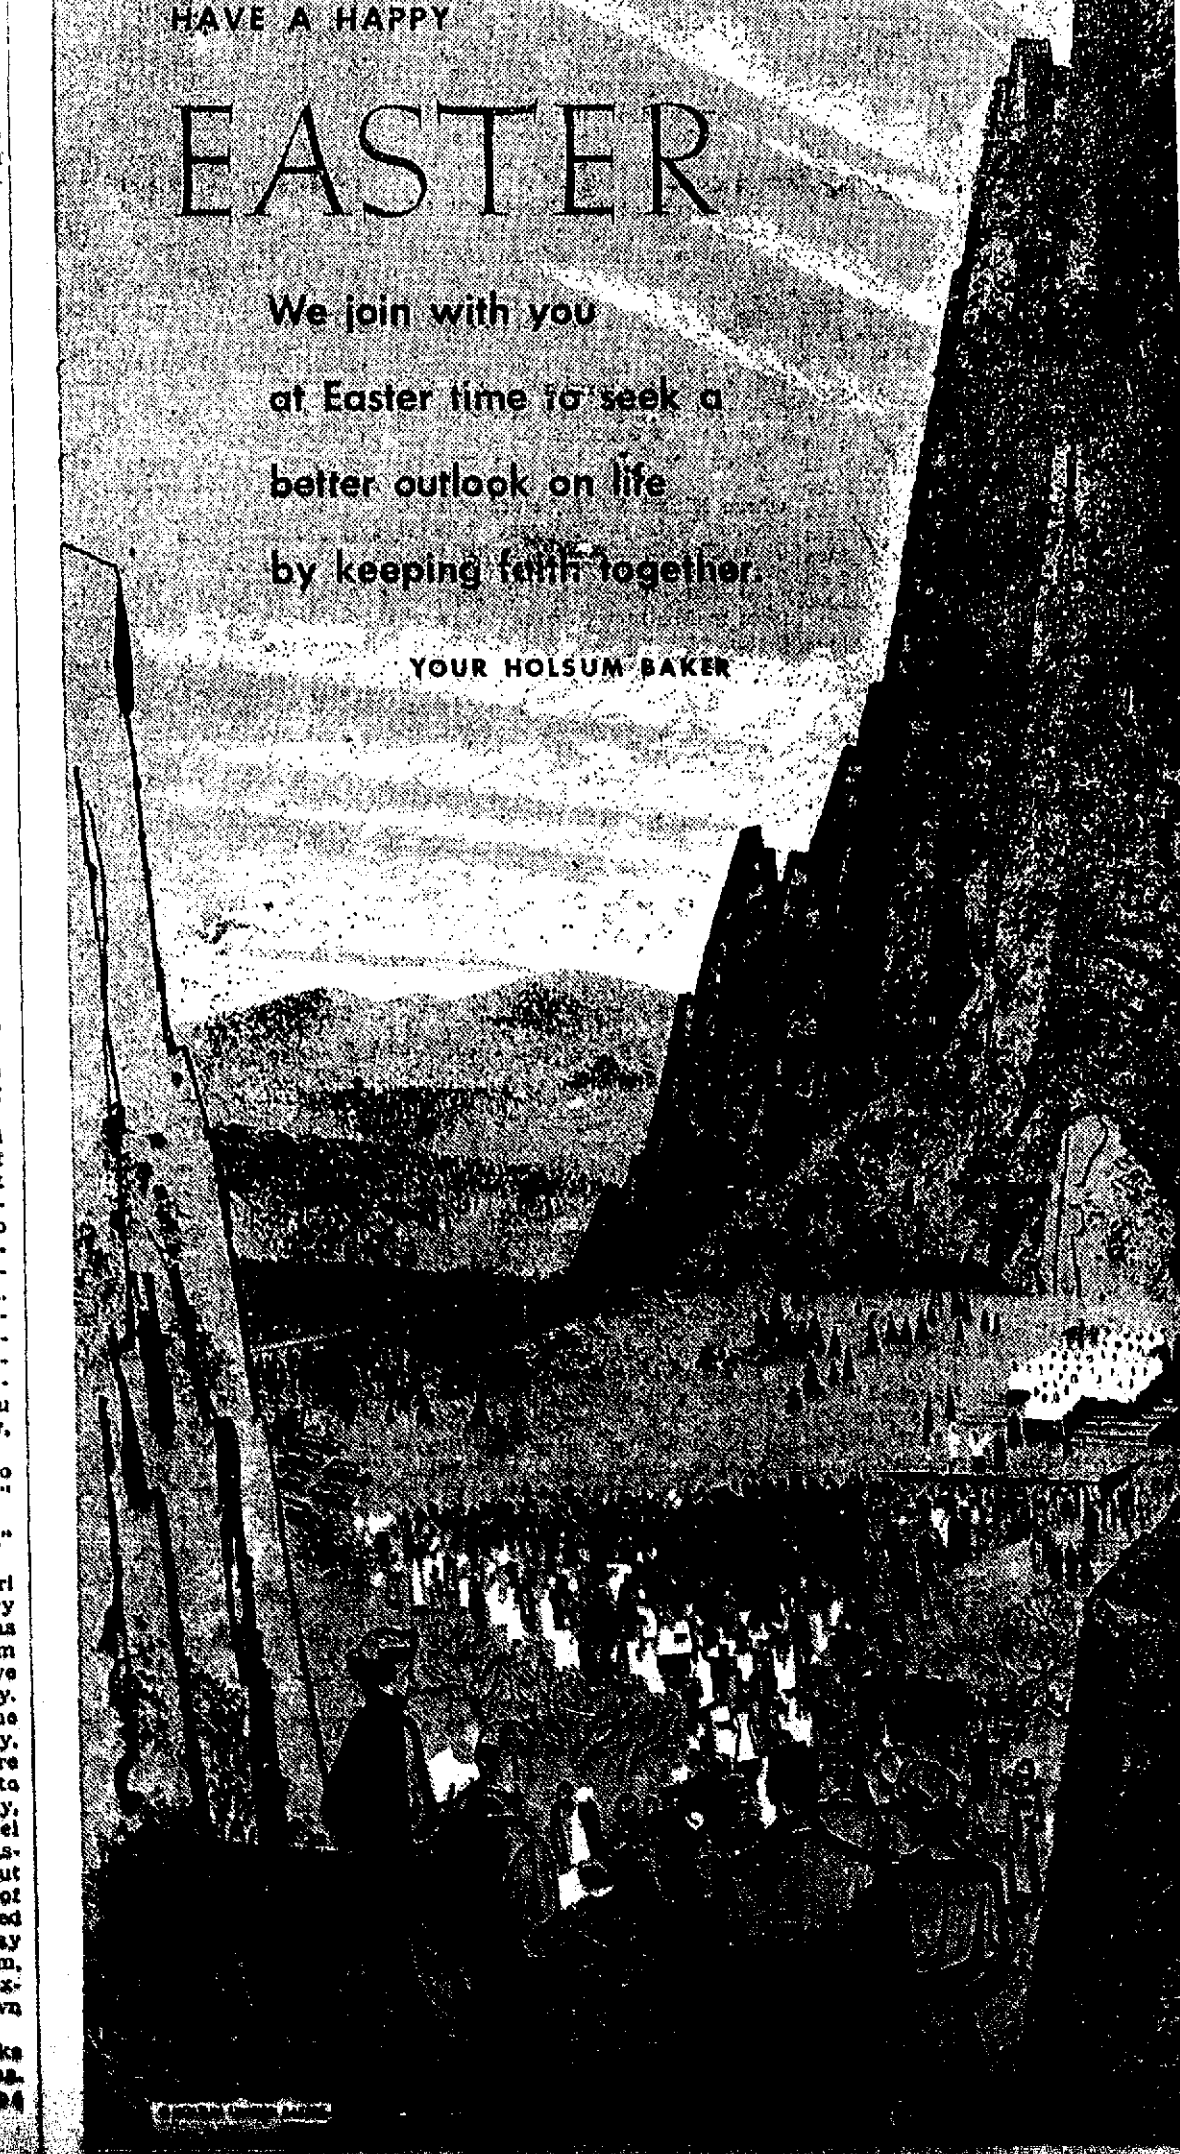

"Now, Leonie," he went on, waving them toward her, "by suggesting politely that you did not expect this to be a gratuitous invitation, you make it plain that you are accepting, not out of necessity, but out of pleasure."

"It sounds very roundabout to me. And hypocritical besides," Leonie objected.

"Listen to your uncle, dear," Heloise said.

"In this particular case," Henri said, "it is necessary to be very careful. Your Cousin Henry was a very poor young man, and I'm afraid that he is overly sensitive about his ability to provide money. So don't be insistent. When he comes up for Saturday or Sunday, you say to him, when you are alone, that it's wonderful of him to think of giving you this holiday, but your aunt and uncle don't feel that it's right that he should assume—well, better come right out and say expenses. He'll say of course not, that he never dreamed of such a thing. And then you say that it's wonderfully kind of him, or very sweet, or some girlish expression like that. Put it your own way."

"It sounds," Leonie said, "like something they might do in China. I think thank you would be enough."

Lakers Out to Win Cage Title

St. Paul, Minn., April 12 (AP)—The Minneapolis Lakers were out to halt a "track meet" offense by the New York Knickerbockers in the "World Series" for the National Basketball Association title, starting here tonight.

Not the least party of the proceedings is the $7,500 stake for the winning team's share of the proceeds.

Coach Joe Lapchick of the Knicks said the "run, run, run" strategy would be used to try to clobber the Lakers' front line height, including George Mikan's 6-10 build.

The series switches to New York for the third and fourth nights Wednesday and Friday nights. Added games, if necessary, are slated here April 14 in New York and April 15, and then back to the Minneapolis.

Werle Claims Whole Deal a Mixup

Hilldale, Calif., April 12 (AP) — Pitcher Bill Werle, fined $500 and suspended indefinitely from the Pittsburgh Pirates for breaking training rules says the entire affair is the "greatest mixup and piece of misinterpretation I've ever heard of."

In Washington last night Pirates General Manager Branch Rickey announced that he had reinstated Werle but that the April 3 fine of $500 still stood.

When notified of Rickey's action, Werle said he was "gratified" but added he had not been formally notified.

His wife, Olga, yesterday released for publication a letter from her husband in which he tells his side of the controversy.

"I read in part:

"As to the mess I'm in—it is the greatest mixup and piece of misinterpretation that I've heard of."

The pitcher said when he asked General Manager Branch Rickey for an explanation of his suspension and fine, his boss became very indignant.

"I asked if it had something to do with a woman supposedly being in my room, and he said, 'well, it's true, isn't it? I swore on my father's grave that it wasn't and that someone was a d—d liar. That seemed to surprise him and he said he would check with Pirate manager Billy Meyer."

When Rickey was asked again about the fine on April 8, Werle said he was told: "Whatever gave you the idea that you were suspended for having a woman in your room? You were fined and suspended for not being on time."

Then, said Werle, he was told to take the dispute to the baseball commissioner. If he wanted to, Werle said, he would go to him, but that he was to rejoin the club in St. Louis on opening day, April 15; if the trade didn't go through.
